4:06 The Sunday Feature

China's Generation Gap Part 1.

Chinese Journalist Haining Liu was born into the 'one-child generation' in the early 1980s. She explores how these political, social and economic changes have affected the relationship between old and young in China. She talks to people who grew up during the Cultural Revolution and how those who lived under strict communism relate to their children who have had much more material, individualistic lives. She also explores new attitudes to work and education as more people choose to study and work and outside the state system. (BBC / Just Radio)

5:00 The World at Five

A roundup of today's news and sport

5:10 Heart and Soul

The Right Thing: Breaking Faith Boundaries in Syria.

Carol Cooke Eid grew up a Christian in Lebanon. As a young woman, she felt uneasy about Islam and wanted as little as possible to do with Muslims. Yet when she began to follow a religious path and later became a nun, she found herself making an extraordinary vow: to dedicate her life to her Muslim brothers and sisters joining a desert monastery near Damascus within striking distance of Islamic State militants. Mike Wooldridge meets Sister Carol and some of her fellow nuns and monks, currently in exile determined to continue their work, despite the dangers they face. (BBC)
