Professor Margaret MacMillan dissects the relationship between war and the civilian. Recorded in Beirut, she looks back at the city's violent past and discusses the impact of war on civilians. She explores how civilians have been deliberately targeted and used as slaves, and why women are still often singled out in mass rapes. She also addresses the proposition that human beings are becoming less violent rather than more violent. (3 of 5, BBC)

5:00 The World at Five

Stepping on Bones - Solovki and Russia's Past

The remote 15th century Solovetsky monastery (or "Solovki") was once one of Russia's most religious sites. But in the 20th century Solovki gained notoriety as the "Mother of Gulags" – the first and most brutal of the concentration camps of the Soviet time, a stark embodiment of repression.

Monks and historians have worked together to keep the dual-legacy of Solovki alive, but there is conflict over whether it can be both a place of religious worship and a memorial to its most painful past. Natalia Golysheva, whose grandfather was a Gulag prisoner, explores Solovki's legacy (BBC)
